

The North American EcoInnovation Network

The North American EcoInnovation Network brings together innovation centers from Canada, Mexico and the United States with the goal of encouraging youth-based innovation and entrepreneurship that is rooted in sustainable development.

Are you part of an innovation center affiliated with an academic institution in North America?

Join the North American EcoInnovation Network and gain access to educational resources, supportive relationships and opportunities for advancement.

The North American EcoInnovation Network was created by the Commission for Environmental Cooperation to cultivate youth and community leadership in innovation and entrepreneurship for environmental protection and sustainable development in North America.
